Transformance Advisors announces an exceptional opportunity for unemployed supply chain management professionals

Boulder, CO – March 23, 2009: Transformance Advisors of Boulder, CO is pleased to announce a special program whereby unemployed supply chain management (SCM) professionals in Colorado and Illinois can demonstrate their expertise and earn a professional certification for the nominal fee of $50. Through generous contributions from APICS Northern Colorado, the International Supply Chain Education Alliance (ISCEA), the Valley Industrial Association, and Transformance Advisors, unemployed SCM professionals can attend an educational review session and take the exam required to earn the Certified Supply Chain Analyst (CSCA) designation.

This $250 program is being provided at the nominal charge of $50 as a helping hand for those impacted by our current economic challenges. The CSCA program covers important supply chain management topics such as Demand Management, Supply Management, Planning Techniques, Manufacturing, Logistics, and Improvement Programs.

Participation for each location is limited to the first 50 registrations.

Commenting on the program, Mike Loughrin, CEO of Transformance Advisors, said "Professional certifications provide evidence of expertise and demonstrate an individual's commitment to their career. This review and exam course is ideal for unemployed SCM professionals that desire to prove their expertise by earning a professional certification for their resume."
